EDITORIAL

Since Sputnik, an ever-increasing interest has been centered on our American system of education. Such critics as Admiral Rickover have been quick to attack our pedagogical principles, urging us to employ European practices. Disagreeing with him is James B. Conant, former president of Harvard. In a study of our American high schools, he emphasizes the difference in historical development and purposes between American and European school systems. He feels that our attitudes toward education, and therefore our organization of it, are basic to our philosophy of the "American way of life." For this reason, what may be desirable in Europe would not be appropriate here. On the Continent, secondary education is available only to the intellectual elite, while in the United States we believe in equal opportunity for all.

Dr. Conant found much to criticize in our American high schools, but using his criteria, it is apparent that we are fortunate in attending a school as fine as Midwood. Our academic classes have been successful, if we can judge from results of Regents examinations, college boards and advanced placement tests. The development of an individual personality, so often ignored in our conformist society, has been fostered here at Midwood through our wide selection of both elective academic subjects and extra-curricular activities. Organizations such as student government, Sing, and publications have given us the opportunity to be creative and to express ourselves, while assuming group responsibility that would otherwise not be given to us.

Because we have learned at Midwood not to assume that the status quo is naturally the best, we are impelled to suggest one change in curriculum that might prove beneficial. Instead of isolated required classes in art and music, we might have had, in our senior year, a broad interdepartmental course dealing with our culture and civilization, a course that integrated the various academic subjects with the fine arts. Too many of us have gone through high school unaware of the enjoyment and fulfillment that can be had from an appreciation of the creative arts.

But Midwood has meant more to us than just the place where we met for classes and activities. There is a certain spirit here that makes our whole educational experience far more valuable than the sum of all the periods we have spent in Midwood. It pervades the social studies class as well as the football field, for the pep roused by the cheerleaders is only part of this spirit. Our teachers are, to a large extent, responsible for this feeling, for along with their instruction in subject matter has come the transference of the ideas of our American democracy. This faith in the common man that transcends all our daily endeavors will give our lives meaning in the future and has given us a distinctly American high school education, so different from secondary education abroad.

Part II

Answer five questions from this part.

1) We decided that if we started a sort of group we would stand a better chance to further our aims. Larry said that if we functioned in a group we would stand a better chance to accomplish a great deal. On April 8th, we had our first meeting at Larry's house with an attendance of twelve people. Larry was elected President and I was elected Treasurer. We decided that fifty cents a month was a correct amount of dues. We also decided that for a cheap price we could get real crazy red and white sweaters.

We decided that the first piece of business was a protest demonstration. We all got together and walked to the place where we all go. When we got to the adjoining sidewalk we all started smoking. After about twenty minutes Mr. ..... came out of the building and walked up to us. Not only did he tell us to stop smoking but he actually told us that our group was illegal. This was a big shock. Larry said that the best thing was to go home and play some punchball.

a) The organization described in this selection most resembles a 1) craft union 2) industrial union 3) fraternity 4) Camp Rising Fellows in Bayonne, New Jersey a.....

b) The narrator of the story wanted to become the treasurer because 1) he was very nationalistic 2) he was very idealistic 3) he was very imperialistic 4) he saw a quick profit b.....

c) The author of this story is trying to say that 1) democracy comes only through a long fight 2) every organization should have crazy sweaters 3) people should not smoke 4) it is better to stay home and play punchball c.....

2) The following was taken from the Sunday issue of the Tirana Times of June 2, 1962.

"Tirana's Ministry of Love was the setting here this morning for the marriage of Miss Pushenka Ashkenazi of Tirana and Koritsa, Albania, to Chou Chen Yi. He is the son of Chairman and Mrs. Ming Li Chen-Yi.

Comrade Ashkenazi gave his daughter away. She wore a pale blue sackcloth worker's uniform decorated with the emblem of the Albanian People's Republic.

Mrs. Yi, who is an alumna of the Stalina Technical School where she majored in advanced methods of garbage disposal, spent her junior year abroad as an agitator. She is a provisional member of the Junior Anti-Colonialist League.

A debutante of the 1947-48 season, the former Miss Ashkenazi was introduced at the Dishwashers' Cotillion.

Her husband graduated from the International Spy School of Peking University where he received a degree in American Reconnaisance Flying. At Peking University he was an active member of the former Russo-Chinese Friendship League.

The state wishes to congratulate the comrades on their patriotic union.

Answer all of the following:

a) Is Miss Ashkenazi a goldbricker? Use facts to substantiate your answer. (5) .....

b) Do you believe that Dior could alleviate some of the tensions of the cold war? Be sure to refer to the paragraph. (15) .....

c) By alluding to socio-economic relations, tell whether they can make a go of their marriage. .....

3) Write a criticism of your social studies teacher. Restrict your response to 60,000 words. Answers will be based on originality. Makeups will be given if your essay is marked by your teacher. (15) .....

4) Give the political, economic and social conditions that gave way to three of the followinlg conditions in history a) the "coup d'etat" of the Kennedy clan b) the controversial civil war in Andorra c) the struggle for a 4th application in tax-supported schools of the 12th Congressional district d) direct election of the President as proposed by the Soy Bean Party of the lower Yangtze River Valley e) the rise and fall of the Peppermint Lounge Aristocracy (15) .....

5) Soviet attacks on the U.S. after the American participation in the invasion of Cuba was published in April 1961, following the unusual Soviet line, "Dirty imperialist war mongers have staged an abortive invasion of the Bay of Pigs. Capitalist efficiency has failed again."

Basing your answer on the above facts, state why you think Mrs. Khrushchev was not chosen one of the world's 12 best dressed women of '31. (15) .....

Dear Seniors:

Too many of us have the impression that every important human need can be satisfied by present scientific knowledge or by technology. There can be no doubt that science has given us a great knowledge of nature and a great power to use it.

What we do not fully grasp is the basic idea that science has given us the capacity to improve the lot of man and the capacity to destroy him. The important issue is the wide use of knowledge and power to create a world in which each individual may live a life of dignity, in which each man may find his highest destiny. Thus, it is the use that we make of present knowledge, rather than the knowledge itself, that will make a qualitative change in the nature of our society.

Dr. Jonas E. Salk recently put this thought with great cogency:

"It is strange to contemplate the vast changes that have occurred since the time of ancient Greece and to observe that modern man finds it possible to master the intricacies of putting men into space, but seems not yet able to solve the world-wide problems of poverty, starvation, and war. Nor has he been able to resolve the seemingly minor, but no less significant wars in communities, between neighbors who wish neither to destroy each other nor to accept each other. Nor has he been able to resolve the wars within himself. This too, would seem to be space for exploration—the kind of exploration that each individual can take part in as an exciting adventure, the kind that could be rewarding for all those who are alive today and for the generations yet to come."

As you leave us it becomes critically important that you appreciate not only what man has accomplished in the past, but also what he must achieve in the future if civilization is to survive. Man has the capacity for greatness; he also can be his own worst enemy, wasting his talents and resources on exploitation of the weak, useless rivalry, and deadly conflict.

You now embark upon a voyage of exploration, and this is so whether you go on to college or not. I can only hope that you will continue to improve yourself as a human being, that you will explore the space of the spirit and of moral values, without which all else, no matter how successful in material terms, may be all "sound and fury signifying nothing."

I wish for you a world in which justice and peace will prevail. Let us all resolve, each in his own small way, to help bring that world into being.

Sincerely yours,

ADMINISTRATION

Many times during our four years at Midwood we have needed advice as to problems ranging from program changes to future education or career plans. The one group which was always ready to help us with these problems was the Guidance Department.

At the beginning of our high school years, members of the Guidance Department consulted with each of us, and helped to direct us into the varied academic and extra-curricular activities which were available.

In our junior year, they began to lessen the tensions put upon us by our uncertain futures. They guided us in making our decisions as to continuing our studies, entering the business world, or serving in the armed forces.

As seniors, we continued to rely upon their counsel. Their tactful expression of concern helped us to develop a sense of independence in handling our problems. Their encouragement was a definite factor in our overcoming of the doubts and ineptitude which confront a new Midwood student.

The benefits which we gained from personal contact with our guidance counselors over a period of three or four years point up the immeasurable value of a close teacher-student relationship.

"The true teacher defends his pupils against his own personal influence. He guides their eyes from himself to the spirit that quickens him.
—Amos Bronson Alcott

Days in social studies confused us with concepts of hindsight and foresight, until we learned finally, what Mrs. B..... meant: the knowledge of our mistakes is the best way to prevent their recurrence.

In math and science we were trained to turn toward the path of intensive investigation as an alternative to the expression of pure opinion. They helped us develop a liberal attitude, and rid us (often painfully) of personal prejudices. Finally, we learned that some things just can't be argued, and swallowing our pride, we accepted the beauty of logical thought.

Music and art taught us wonderful forms of expression which can convey feelings more adequately than words.

Home economics, industrial arts, accounting, and secretarial studies trained us vocationally. They gave us the opportunity to explore many of the fields which will be open to us in the future.

Health education helped us to develop and care for our bodies, essential for physical well-being.

In English our "creative sensitivities" were stimulated and our imaginations were allowed to soar to all heights. Studying the literature of the world, we gained insight into the minds of the people of the past.

We were taught foreign languages and cultures, necessary in understanding people all over the world.

Our education at Midwood didn't begin or end with just a textbook and a sliderule. Rather, the greatest gains we made were through the people we met: the inspiring teachers and friends we grew to love, to admire, and to respect.

It is true that there were pressures put upon us during these years. We were pulled into "special" classes, used for "special" tests, and recruited for "special" projects. Yet all the while, we felt quite less than "special." There were times when the blue walls seemed more like a prison than a "house of learning." However, when we look under the surface of funny quips and student cliches, each of us finds at least one incident of real happiness.

KENSINGTON

On 18th Avenue and Ocean Parkway, there stands an old, well kept building with a sign that reads: "Midwood High School, Kensington Branch." This is Kensington, the home of Midwood freshmen. Those who have attended Kensington can best remember the limited space in the cafeteria, and the walls that slide back to become the auditorium. However, they might remember much more than that, the friendly atmosphere that helped them adjust gradually to high school life, the closely knit relationship between teachers and students, the deans and advisors who were personally acquainted with almost every student.

Since the annex began in 1957, it has had a very capable and dedicated faculty. Mr. Dobren, the Administrative to the Assistant and head of Kensington, has worked diligently to bring the two buildings closer together. Mr. Kussin, Dean of Boys, and Mrs. Rosman, Guidance Counselor, have undertaken the job of adjusting the problems students may have and making the students feel at home in their new surroundings.

Kensington's activities are run much like those at the main building. The annex participates in the annual Sing. It has its own newspaper, the Kenwood, which keeps the freshmen informed of events at Kensington, and at the main building. The Kensington Coordinator, a major office of the City of Midwood, was created for the express purpose of coordinating the annex with the main building. Although the problems of the annex are brought before the student council at the main building, Kensington has its own student government. There are term officers and a student council which attempt to settle the affairs of the annex.

Most certainly, the annex is an integral part of Midwood. Prior to Kensington's establishment, Midwood was operated on a thirteen period day. Classes were crowded and space was limited. However, as soon as the freshmen moved to Kensington, conditions improved for upperclassmen and freshmen alike.

By the establishment of the Kensington Annex, a great step in the growth of Midwood was achieved.

Student Government centers around a musty, dark corner in the basement. Among the officers involved, the most important is the Mayor. To qualify for this position, one must possess "the king-becoming graces, as justice, verity, temperance, stableness, bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness, devotion, patience, courage, fortitude." He must also look exactly like the previous mayor, and have a deep desire to go to Amherst.

The Executive Secretary must be clean in thought, word, and deed, and be talented enough to prepare a new "No Eating in B71" sign each week. The sole purpose of the Comptroller seems to be to undo the mess left by the previous Comptroller. The Kensington Coordinator coordinates Kensington, whatever that may mean.

termed the Board of Estimate meeting, this group meets with the Commissioners. To become a Commissioner, an applicant must have lost a major city election, or gone out with the Mayor. At these meetings are discussed: what one should wear to the Friday night dance, if there should be a Friday night dance, and where one should go after the Friday night dance.

The Student Council is chosen at serious homeroom elections. The first order of business usually is to oust the major city officers from the meeting.

Cornelius

A PARABLE

(recite to the accompaniment of a kettle drum)

This is the story of Cornelius—
A Midwood senior, but not an average senior.
He was not a cynic, not a rebel,
He would never cheat on tests.

He did not join cliques, or insult his teachers,
He did not shove in the halls.
One day in the lunchroom, amid the daily uproar,
Cornelius was hit by a stray milk carton

And Cornelius
Woke up.
He said, "What do I see?"
"I see Cynicism, Rebellion, Dishonesty, Snobbery, Egotism.

"I see civilization collapsing."
Cornelius sought refuge beneath a table.
Amid the greasy remnants of tuna fish.
He sat and meditated for many hours.

Then he rose, undefeated, and said,
"I will preach the truth."
Cornelius stood on a chair and raised his hands.
Those rowdy students looked up in wonder,

And there was silence.
Then Cornelius spoke, and he said,
"Listen, brothers: You have fallen into evil,
But I have come to save you."

And the Midkids screamed, "Salvation!"
And Cornelius said,
"I have come to tell you the secret of existence.
Love is the secret. Love and be kind.

Be kind, brothers, and happiness is yours."
The Midkids listened, and they shrieked, "Yeah!"
They said, "We have heard, Cornelius.
And no longer shall we fight and cheat.

Speak in cynicism, act in rebellion, follow blindly:
We shall grow up.

And there was revelry and gaiety and wild joy

Because the truth had come.
And Cornelius, who had suffered, who had struggled,
But who had not grown bitter,
Grinned.

Hey, remember the time we crashed Evelyn Elser's party at the end of our sophomore year? Oh boy, did we have a swinging time.

Our Junior year was a drag. N'est-ce pas? I mean we just left the room for ten months.

But man! What a senior year!

The very same day that I made it with Nancy, Mr. Eisenstadt complimented me.

"Good job in class. Keep up the good work."

You know I was nothing until I met Fred. I was just an ordinary sophomore with a red bow in my hair.

But Fred, he taught me to be somebody big.

Don't say that, Larry. It's fun to learn how the school works and all that stuff. You know, I just might run for mayor.

It's the football team.

You have a good team and the school has a good year.

We had some junior year.

The Epilog editor approaches his job at the start of the fall term with what may be termed excessive enthusiasm and creative talent, a smattering of experience, and a complete lack of realism concerning themes, deadlines, layouts, deadlines, and deadlines. For six months the respective staffs breeze over their responsibilities in favor of social gatherings in the crafts room that is the headquarters of Epilog.

Mr. Shapiro (the faculty advisor of what might be called Schizophrenics Anonymous) is a civilizing influence. Editors must be calmed from fits of hysteria and paralysis when they realize that the final, ultimate, and immutable deadline is but three weeks away. Senior pictures still must be taken and editorials, "blurbs," captions, and "body-copy" must be written.

Somehow the yearbook gets written and put together. Its publication and distribution to the senior class produces a variety of reactions that fit into three categories. One; to the senior, the yearbook, along with his diploma, senior jewelry, and graduation pictures, is a symbol of graduation. He will show his book to his parents, grandparents, and friends, and in ten years or so, to his children. He will point proudly to his picture, the pictures of his buddies and the write-ups of his team or club. Two; to the surviving staff members, the publication of the yearbook represents a rather hectic way of getting into Harvard. Three; to Mr. Shapiro, who vows that he will choose a more level-headed staff for the next year's Epilog, one which has a sufficient amount of experience and creative talent, and what may be termed a complete lack of realistic outlook concerning themes, deadlines, layouts and deadlines, the completion of the yearbook represents a welcome free period.

EPILOG

PATTERNS

Once each year, Patterns, an anthology of all that is trivia and avant-garde in Midwood, is published. Under the supervision of Mr. Singer. Patterns has been of great service to the school because: (a) it edifies the students, (b) it makes money, (c) the custodial staff uses it as fuel for the boilers, and (d) mothers of students use it to wrap fish.

Just how it received the name Patterns is not known. There is certainly no apparent pattern to its contents, which includes T. S. Eliotesque poems, stories with Joycean syntax, Eisenhower syntax, and Kafka layouts. The authors of these works include beats, dilettantes, sophomores and writers. In reality, they are highly sensitive people who write stories about even more highly sensitive people. These stories are passed on to two insensitive, destructive editors whose rejection slips sound more like Mencken's than Midwood's. Having been initially accepted, these poems, stories, or other creative masterpieces must be revised. Revision, a minor operation, requires only paper, pencil, and some rope for tying down the author.

"No one but a blockhead," wrote Samuel Johnson, "ever wrote for anything but money." Patterns does not think that this is true. Midwood students have written for things other than money. But one needs money to buy Patterns. It is nonprofit, nonsectarian, nonpartisan, and nonsense. No issue has ever been perfect, yet somehow the staff turns out a good issue with sweet smelling ink.

Another dull homeroom period rolls by. I know the Midwood flagpole down to its last splinter, and I've played 53 games of Dots. Wait, a ray of hope! Argus has just been delivered! I can see that my homeroommates, who have been suffering from the same boredom, are now devouring this six page newspaper.

As usual, the boys in my homeroom are reading Argus as if it were the Talmud, literally and figuratively. They read it backwards, starting with the sports page. Like all normal Midwood students, they are totally avoiding the Editor's, Mayor's, and Principal's messages. They will not read the series of announcements of Midwood dances, elections, or reports of other minor events such as Regents.

The girls are completely avoiding the sports page, preferring to read such features as Midmoods and Spotlight. As they read, they are filing all reviews of books, movies, and plays in the recesses of their minds so as to be able to supply weighty opinions on these subjects at their Vassar interviews.

The purpose of Argus is more than to provide information for an alert student body, or to serve as a lining for the garbage pail for an alert parent. Even the most intellectual of our existentialists reads Argus. Can you think of a better way to spend a period in Family Relations? I think not.

ARGUS

ROAD AHEAD

Road Ahead is carefully planned to provide Midwood students with essays on domestic and world affairs that will stimulate the interest of freshmen and seniors alike. It is a difficult publication to organize, since the articles require research and analysis—often long and painstaking jobs. Even more difficult is the task of formulating a personal viewpoint based on an evaluation of the material. Finally, this viewpoint must be presented in an interesting and convincing way. Working on Road Ahead can teach the members of the staff to think thoroughly and logically.

The purpose of Road Ahead, however, is not just to aid the intellectual growth of a handful of students who write for it. The magazine deals with current events and issues that are provocative to the well informed student. Not only does it bring the important problems of the world to the awareness of students, but it is the hope that Road Ahead promotes an active and enthusiastic interest in debating such issues as state's rights, foreign aid, the Common Market, and integration; that such issues represent no mere collection of words, but that they are living and exciting challenges.

SING

We, the Seniors of 1962, Desirous of Aiding Inexperienced Classes with the Great Midwood Institution, Sing, hereby Bequeath the Following Sing Manual:

OBJECTIVES: Please the judges; stay in school long enough so that you don't have to walk the dog; WIN!

PROCEDURE: Elect hypersensitive, emotional, sexy chairman; intellectual, domineering co-chairman; two emotional, loud-voiced leaders; two secretaries who "promise to really work!" The Lyric Committee should consist of five egotistic, obstinate friends of the chairman, five obstinate friends of the co-chairman, one talented, good-natured scapegoat. All of these must have large basements and everlasting supplies of cake and potato chips. The Dance Committee is chosen by the choreographer; must have large, muscular calves, leotards, and clean feet.

MEETINGS: Theoretically, lyric committee meetings are planned and held once a week. Practically, meetings are planned thusly and held rarely. First, get rid of all talented, well-meaning members. Have each remaining member write a song. If written to a tune other than "Clementine" or "When I Was a Lad," it shows originality. The writer is immediately eliminated. All meetings must end before College Bowl begins. Mass meetings consist of well-disorganized, tone-deaf, noisy chorus; compulsory attendance announced before each meeting; a list of threats prepared—each used a minimum of seventy-four times; candy counter opened before each meeting. These meetings end when leader collapses hysterically.

SONGS: Each song must be revised a sufficient number of times to confuse the chorus indefinitely. Each song written by co-chairman must be discarded and rewritten by chairman's friends. The Alma Mater may not be written more than a week prior to Sing. Songs must be mimeographed approximately two days after they have been dictated for the fourth time.

SING NIGHT: Smile — you may be on Candid Camera. Memorize: 2, 4, 6, 8, who do we appreciate. . . . .

Tho we must part

Tho lonely be the path before us

In memory still, our voices will

Be bound in treasured chorus.
